

Peter Pan Review Blog By Christopher C

In April we watched peter pan in the Olivier theatre.

My thoughts on the production were that it was very different to any other plays I have seen. The plot in a summary was peter pan (the boy who didn't grow up) finds wendy and takes her to Neverland, they work together to fight captain hook. A big plot twist was you think peter is going to drown but he escapes.

The main characters were:

- Peter pan
- Wendy
- Michael
- John
- Captain hook
- Smee

But my favourite character was Tootles he was very funny and kind and my second favourite character was Tinkerbell because he was played by a man and looked homeless because he wore a tutu and fairy wings but no shirt. Tinkerbell also talked in gibberish so it was funny when he spoke.

In my opinion I didn't like it that much because it wasn't very atmospheric when I saw a pirate playing a lost boy and the dad and the mum playing captain hook. But my favourite part was when Peter Pan nearly got killed by captain hook, this was accompanied by dramatic music and interesting clever prop work. I didn't like that you could see the band in background it was weird.

The prop work was very well done, when they had the crocodile it was really cool it looked like a real crocodile. The acting was very good no actor went out of character or laughed. The lighting was also good because I could tell when it was dark or there was lightning, it told a lot.
